Dulles Gives Up Carnegie Post, Bundy Named

Peace Endowment Board
Elects Boston Lawyer
to Succeed Its Chairman

John Foster Dulles, designated as President-elect Eisenhower's Secretary of State, resigned yesterday as chairman of the board of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

In disclosing the acceptance of Mr. Dulles's resignation, "with regret," the board, after its meeting yesterday, announced the election of Harvey Hollister Bundy, a partner of the Boston law firm of Choate, Hall and Stewart, as chairman of the board to succeed him.

Mr. Bundy, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., and sixty-four, has been a trustee of the endowment since 1948 and has served as its vice-chairman since last year. He is a graduate of Yale and upon taking his law degree at Harvard Law School in 1914 he became secretary to the late Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court.

Served in War Posts

Mr. Bundy served as Assistant Secretary of State from 1931 to 1933 and was special Assistant Secretary of War from 1941 to 1945.

Mr. Dulles, a member of the endowment board since 1944 and chairman since 1946, announced his resignation last week as chairman of the boards of both the Rockefeller Foundation and the General Education Board.

In his letter of resignation to the Carnegie Endowment, Mr. Dulles said he was resigning from "all of my trustee and directorship responsibilities in view of the public responsibilities which are in contemplation for me and my desire to prepare for them."

The letter, addressed to Joseph E. Johnson, Endowment president,

"I have been very proud to be associated with the Carnegie Endowment. My grandfather, John W. Foster, was a close friend of Mr. Carnegie and an initial member of the board of trustees. The Endowment has done and is doing splendid work in promoting Mr. Carnegie's ideal of a warless world."

"The task is more difficult than perhaps he conceived. That, however, is not a reason for discouragement and abandonment but for more intensive effort. I believe that the present program upon which the Endowment is embarked, including notably its project for an international center in close relation with the United Nations, represents a sound way of moving forward the goal of a just peace. I wish you all success for the future."

The board, in a resolution, declared that the "regret which the trustees experience in losing the direct services of Mr. Dulles is tempered by pride in his designation to the high office of Secretary of State." The board members added: "They find compensation in the knowledge that he will be in a position to direct the resources of the United States government to objectives of world peace and justice."
